How can I protect myself from RF Design u-blox tracking?

2019/11/05

Hi Chuck! The RF Design created the microchip called u-blox which can be installed in many different types of modern trackers. With this microchip inside any tracker will become very dangerous thing because it is not easy to get rid of it with common measures. By common measures I mean GPS jammers which are quite effective against common GPS tracking devices but not against this one. Let me explain why. The main feature of RF Design u-blox is its cross-frequency work. No matter what kind of model is built-in into the tracker, be it LEON or LISA, it can easily adapt to such frequency bands as 2G (GSM, GPRS, CDMA), 3G and even 4G to use them as the auxiliary frequencies when the main GPS tracking frequency cannot do its job, for example, when you are in the tunnel or in some other place where GPS cannot reach you. Still that is not all that it's got. The frequency ranges mentioned above are used for few things. First of all, if the original GPS tracking of this system is being jammed, the RF Design u-blox detects that and uses its wireless frequencies to send the signal to the base station about its being jammed by the GPS jammer at this very moment. But if you think that its tracking came to an end, you are wrong. This u-blox microchip uses cell phone bands to triangulate your location by means of cell phone towers, regardless of the mobile phone operator you are using. As you can see, the RF Design u-blox microchip is a powerful stuff for any tracker to have inside of it. So how can you block its work? This one is tough one, so you need to avoid being tracked by trackers with RF Design u-blox inside and in addition jam its 4G connectivity to make sure that it is not working for good.
